Tree Plantation

Points: Introduction • Importance of Trees • Trees and the Environment • Trees in Our Daily Life • The Need for Tree Plantation • The Best Time for Plantation • Our Duties • Conclusion

1. Introduction

Tree plantation means planting trees in large numbers. Trees are very important for our life. We cannot live without trees because they give us oxygen and help us stay alive. Trees make our world green and beautiful.

2. Importance of Trees

Trees give us oxygen, fruits, flowers, wood, and shade. They take in carbon dioxide and help keep the air clean. Birds and many animals live in trees. Trees also help keep the balance of nature.

3. Trees and the Environment

Trees help us in many ways. They bring rain and help keep the weather cool. Their roots hold the soil and help prevent soil erosion. Trees also reduce the harmful effects of storms and floods.

4. Trees in Our Daily Life

We use wood to make furniture, doors, and many other things. We get fruits and medicine from some trees. Trees also give us shade on hot days. So, trees are useful in our everyday life.

5. The Need for Tree Plantation

Today, many trees are being cut down to build houses, roads, and factories. As a result, the environment is becoming warmer and many animals are losing their homes. We should plant more trees to protect nature.

6. The Best Time for Plantation

The rainy season is a good time for tree plantation in Bangladesh because young trees can get enough water. We can plant trees beside roads, around schools, in gardens, and on unused land.

7. Our Duties

Everyone should take part in tree plantation. Students can plant trees in their schools and homes. We should water young plants and protect them from damage. We must not cut down trees without a good reason.

8. Conclusion

In conclusion, tree plantation is very important for us and for the next generation. We should plant more trees and take care of them. If we protect trees today, they will help keep our future safe and beautiful.

So, we should remember the slogan, “Plant more trees, save our life.”

Colour key: Black = main composition text; teal = extra supporting sentences. Blue bold headings highlight the points. Red is not used.

Newspaper

Points: Introduction • Types of Newspapers • What a Newspaper Contains • Importance of a Newspaper • Newspaper and Society • Newspapers in the Modern Age • Disadvantages and Careful Reading • Conclusion

1. Introduction

A newspaper is a paper that gives us news and information about the world. It is one of the most common sources of information. People read newspapers to know what is happening around them.

2. Types of Newspapers

There are different kinds of newspapers. Some are daily, and some are weekly. Newspapers may be in Bangla or English. Some newspapers are printed on paper, while many are also available online.

3. What a Newspaper Contains

A newspaper contains news about our country and other countries. It also has sports news, business news, education news, weather reports, and job advertisements. We can read articles, stories, and opinions in a newspaper.

4. Importance of a Newspaper

A newspaper helps us learn about important events. It increases our knowledge and helps us understand the world better. Students can improve their vocabulary and general knowledge by reading newspapers regularly.

5. Newspaper and Society

A newspaper can raise public awareness about social problems. It can inform people about health, education, the environment, and public safety. It also helps people know about the work of the government and different organizations.

6. Newspapers in the Modern Age

Nowadays, many people read news on websites and mobile phones. Online newspapers can give news quickly. However, printed newspapers are still useful to many readers because they are easy to read without a phone or computer.

7. Disadvantages and Careful Reading

Sometimes, a newspaper may contain wrong or misleading news. So, we should read news carefully and check important information from trusted sources. We should not believe or share every piece of news without checking it.

8. Conclusion

In conclusion, a newspaper is an important part of our daily life. It gives us news, knowledge, and useful information. We should develop the habit of reading newspapers and always choose reliable sources.

A good newspaper helps us become informed and responsible citizens.

Colour key: Black = main composition text; teal = extra supporting sentences. Blue bold headings highlight the points. Red is not used.